SOLID STATE QUARTZ WATCHES

The latest triumph of integrated circuitry. An entirely different kind of timekeeper—far more accurate than the most expensive mechanical watch.

The Fundamental Principal:

The higher the time base, the more accurate the timepiece. The tuning fork which vibrates at 360 times per second is more accurate than the standard balance wheel which rocks at five times per second. The crystal used in most quartz watches oscillates at 32,768 times per second giving quartz watches accuracy to within a few minutes a year.

Types of Display.

LED: light emitting diode digital display.
LCD: liquid crystal display—digits show continuously through reflection of available light.
Analog: hybrid electronic watch combines quartz time base with traditional hands. Unlike conventional timepieces, quartz watches have no moving parts. No cleaning, oiling or mechanical wearing. Energy is provided by tiny silver or mercury oxide batteries.
